Observe Test Well

Sparked by a six-run second inning, the Braves overturned the Redlegs 11-6 Thursday night behind the pitching of Bobby Dorris, who struck out nine Reds.

Bobby Begert hit a home run in the second inning for the Redlegs to start scoring in the game. In the bottom half, the Braves began their scoring spree.

Tom Langston walked, Mike Calliham got to first on an error, Gaylord Stroup hit a one-bagger as did Irlbeck. Clements walked and so did Dorris. All scored. Stroup, who led off hitting in the inning, walked the second time up and was left on base.

In the third inning, the Braves picked up four more runs. Devin, Norman Smyrl and Dorris walked and Calliham hit a one-bagger. All scored.

The Redlegs failed to score in the fourth, while the Braves got another run by Dorris after a one-base hit.

In the fifth, the Redlegs scored twice, with Tommy Sanford and Begert crossing the plate. In the sixth, the Legs gained three runs by Joel Richardson, Steve Burgess and Dale Yarbrough.

DODGERS 5, YANKEES 1

On Saturday night, the Dodgers downed the Yankees 5-1 in a game that saw Dodger Larry Holman strike out seven Yankees and Yankee Dudley Moore strike out 11 Dodgers.

The Dodgers began their scoring in the first inning, with two runs off two hits. Bill Albracht and Holman crossed the plate. In the second inning, Albracht scored again. In the third inning, John Brandon and Johnny Sims scored, making the scoreboard read 5-0.

REDLEGS 4, YANKEES 3

Beginning the second half of the season, the Redlegs defeated the Yankees 4-3 Monday night behind the pitching of Steve Burgess.

The Reds scored first in the bottom of the first inning, with Bobby Evans crossing the plate. The 1-0 score carried until the fourth inning, when the Yankees pulled ahead with three runs scored by Ronnie Brock, Wallace Busteed and Preston Prichard. The Redlegs made the score 3-2 by scoring one run in the bottom of the inning. Gary Fletcher scored.

In the sixth, the Redlegs pulled the game out of the fire when two outs had been made. Don Hawkins got on base and scored to tie up the game and Fletcher made the wining score.

BRAVES 7, DODGERS 5

On Tuesday night the Braves reshuffled the standings by defeating the Dodgers 7-5, with Ralph Irlbeck handling the pitching chores. John Byrd was the Dodger pitcher.

Both sides scored one run in the first inning, the Dodger score coming from Marion Hicks and the Brave run coming from Gaylord Stroup. The Dodgers passed the top half of the second inning by, but the Braves came through with two scores from Norman Smyrl and Irlbeck.

In the top of the third, the Dodgers went one ahead on three runs by Hicks, Byrd and Ralph Kuehn. But the Braves took their lead back in the bottom half with two runs by Stroup and Bobby Chumley.

The Dodgers failed to score in the fourth inning, but the Braves got their final two runs in that inning. Stroup crossed the plate for the third time in the game and Irlbeck for the second.

The fifth inning was clear of scores, and Johnny Sims picked up the final Dodger run in the sixth.

Nine Scouts on Canoe Trip Arrive At Advance Base in Minnesota

(The nine Canyon scouts on the Sommers Canoe trip through the Canadian wilds left the Minnesota base camp last weekend. This dispatch from the Canyon News special correspondent was written on Thursday.—Editor)

By BILL CORNETTE

Well, here we are at last. The canoe base is just wonderful and the guides are real nice and helpful. We got here at about two o'clock this afternon and ever since we set foot on this place we have been as busy as bee.

It is now 10:30 p. m. and this is the first time I had a chance to write.

When we first got here we were welcomed by the main guide and given some refreshment. After that we were separated into crews and started getting ready to go. We learned what to do when the canoe turns over.

Last night we stayed at St. Paul, Minn., and got there about 5:30. We had time to go down and see the sights. James Young, Roy Harris and I went over to Minneapolis.

We had a nice time and when we got back to the park where we were staying it was after dark. We had trouble finding the bus, but finally did and got to bed. But after we got in bed the mosquitoes about ate us up.

The first night we stayed in Beatrice, Neb., in a park there and it was nice without so many mosquitoes.

We left Amarillo about 30 minutes late because we couldn't get the bus started.

Speaking of mosquitoes, they are about to eat me up so I will say goodbye for now.

What About a Community Center

All around Canyon, various groups are talking of a community center. The youth recreation group wants a permanent place for the junior high and high school parties. The Junior Livestock Association wants a permanent place for their shows, so their program can be expanded. Many womens clubs and civic organizations would like a place where meetings and entertainments can be held.

Most likely, it won't be long before one group or another publicly advances a proposition for a community center building. When it happens, there will be a great uproar from those who say it "can't be done," and it won't be done unless those who really feel the need for a center go to work.

Mrs. Jack Walker, who among other things is a graduate student at West Texas State, has conducted a fairly comprehensive study of community centers as a graduate project in Art Education. Her study tells of the activities of other cities and of the nationwide movement for establishing community centers.

But her study is in the main a suggested plan that Canyon might follow. It outlines the need for such a center, tells of an organizational setup and gives possible programs that the community might undertake for various age groups.

Mrs. Walker points out that the people of Canyon can finance the program if we feel it is worthwhile. As a specific example, she says the current Little League shows what the cooperation of all the citizens can do.

Mrs. Walker's list of suggested activities for a community center ranges from "story-hour" sessions for children through arts and crafts and hobby work to a community orchestra and chorus, drama for all age groups, workshops, educational classes and community discussions.

She suggests that the latter, the old town hall sort of thing, can accomplish near miracles in making Canyon a better place to live. She recognizes that as a community, Canyon has sometimes been a divided city, with a seldom-stated, but often felt, division between the college people and business people, between different business groups and between townspeople and farmers nearby.

"A community center would provide an opportunity for all these divergent groups to find common ground of knowledge of each other," Mrs. Walker says. "We would all find that we are, after all, not really different. We all have much the same hopes, dreams, desires, feelings and needs."

As a first step, the study suggests a planning committee. "Since the P-TA is concerned with young people and families, it seems to me that this is a logical place to begin. The P-TA might appoint a committee to study developments in other cities, and apply them to our own city," Mrs. Walker points out.

Mrs. Walker's study could be taken as a guide for a good way to establish a community center, it could be used as is or adapted as necessary. But the study walks right down the line of thinking that a lot of Canyon people are doing. It makes good reading for those of us who would like to have a place to meet with our neighbors from across town.

We have a copy of the study, and others have been given to Delbert Lowes, Dr. James P. Cornette, Rex Reeves, Hosea Foster, the Rev. Strauss Atkinson and Raymond Raillard.

Project Underway

Some time ago we suggested that it would be nice for the people of Canyon to see about getting trees planted in the center strip of the four-lane highway south to Happy when it is completed.

Already the Canyon Garden Club has taken over the idea as a project. At one time the club was told by the highway department that it would take care of such plantings if it is requested by an organization, and that's the plan the club will work on.

A committee was appointed to contact the department for full particulars, and we feel that when the highway is completed, there will be trees in the middle. Congratulations to the Canyon Garden Club for taking on a project that will create such a good impression on travelers.

Blowout Time!

Early next fall the Board of Regents of the Texas State Teachers Colleges will be in Canyon on an official visit to West Texas State. We don't know how long the board will be here, but if Canyon doesn't put the big pot in the little for the regents, it's a cinch we don't know much about buttering bread.

Lots of people who live down in the south part of Texas apparently fail to recognize that any part of the state lies north of Austin or maybe Temple. When they get up here, they're surprised even though they may have been here before.

It's up to us to surprise the board of regents, and we ought to make it a pleasant surprise. The board decides on the growth and activities of the teachers colleges, and we think it would be helpful if the members of the board could associate West Texas State with that "nice town where we had such a good time. My, weren't those people good to us."

It is our understanding that the spouses of the members will be along for the trip. It wouldn't hurt at all to plan a little side entertainment for them while the regents are busy with official things.

When the board gets here, that'll be the day to drag out the bunting, put on our smiles and get set for a big blowout.

Betty Williams in the Lamb County Leader tells of driving between Oklahoma City and Enid during the Fourth of July holiday when the radio intoned, "There have been 12 fatal accidents on Oklahoma's highways during the holidays. Will you be the 13th?"

She continued: "Just at that time, with a mighty crash, the hood of the car blew up, wrapping itself around the top of the car . . . pulverizing the windshield . . . I finally brought the car to a stop . . . with no damage other than a crushed windshield, battered hood and shattered nerves . . . our family can't seem to understand why such an absent minded driver can escape wrecks. This is especially true when the Giant and Dodger minor teams tangle. However, she says the boys often keep the game going long after they get home at night."

Harold Hudson in the Ochiltree County Herald: "This seems fantastic to an old cherry swiper, but there are cherry trees in this area that are going to waste because no one has time to pick them. We got this bit of information from John Mayfield, who stopped by our house the other day with a dishpan full of cherries, freshly gathered. Said he got them from a yard where the owners were glad to have them picked. Says he is making good wages in the late afternoon gathering cherries and plans on a long winter with plenty of cherry preserves.

"Times have changed. We can remember making plans for cherry swiping long before they turned red. And nowadays the trees are full of fruit that isn't picked by the boys before the owners get to them!"

A lecturer, suspecting that publicity would lessen attendance at repeat performances, asked the reporter of a local paper not to publish his address.

The reporter's version was this: "Mr. Smith delivered an excellent lecture in the church hall. He told some very good stories, but, unfortunately, they cannot be published."

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

By BOYCE HOUSE

We newspapermen like to tell about the "scoops" we have scored but this is about an exclusive which I could have written but didn't.

It was during World War II and I was on an early morning train en route to San Antonio to originate the Sunday radio network program which I then was giving. Down the aisle came a man of medium height, stocky figure, in shirt sleeves, his hair rumpled as though he had spent the night on the train.

I spoke but he, thinking I might not be able to place him, supplied the information, "I'm Price Daniel." I had recognized him as we had met a number of times but of course had not expected to see him there. He was then Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives. (The legislature was not in session then.) "Going to San Antonio?" I asked. "Yes." "On business?" "Yes"—then, after a pause he said, "yes, you might call it that; I'm going into the Army." He added that he was going in as a private.

"I hadn't heard anything about it" was my answer. "No," he responded, I just wanted to go in without any fanfare and I'd appreciate it if you didn't write anything about it." I agreed; we shook hands and I wished him well—probably the last person to do so before he took the oath as a new soldier.

It was several months later before it came out that the Speaker was in the Army. I could have "scooped" everybody but didn't because that was the way that the future Attorney General-Senator-Governor wished.

There used to be an able Arkansas politician, a long time ago, named Smead Powell. He was an attorney in a river town.

One day a colored man said, "Jedge, could you loan me a dollar?" The lawyer expressed regret that he could not comply with the request.

The colored man called to his son, "Come on, Powell; let's go." The lawyer asked, "What did you call him?" The father replied, "Powell." Complimented that his name had been bestowed upon the lad, Powell said, "I believe I can loan you that dollar after all" and he handed him over a silver dollar.

Then he had a sudden thought and he asked "What is the boy's full name?" The man replied, "His full name is Powell Clayton Jones."

EXHAUSTED FATHER

Daddy was showing his small son around the Zoo. After being asked what the lions, tigers, bears, etc., were, the father was getting a little exhausted and his patience was nearly at an end.

They came to the monkey-house and the little boy said:

"Daddy, what are they?"

"I don't know," replied the father, "but by the look of the sawdust on the floor, they're carpenters."

NEWS LETTER

FROM CONGRESSMAN WALTER ROGERS OF THE 18TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Status of Forces Agreement - The Bow Resolution - The Girard Case

A smoldering international issue of long standing will probably burst into flame just about the time you receive this newsletter. I speak of the Bow Resolution introduced by Congressman Frank Bow of Ohio. This Resolution concerns the Status of Forces Agreement, which is Article 7 of the North Atlantic Treaty, and other treaties and agreements which provide for foreign countries to have criminal jurisdiction over American Armed Forces personnel stationed within their boundaries.

This has not been a crucial issue in the past, for the simple reason it has never before been favorably recommended by the Committee on Foreign Affairs. It was the subject of much oratory in many places throughout this country and, also, on the Floor of Congress, but nothing effective could be done until the matter came before the House of Representatives for official decision. It is now pending in the Rules Committee and probably will be presented to the House before July 15th.

The Resolution, in effect, directs the President to take action nullifying provisions in the North Atlantic Treaty and other treaties and agreements—those provisions which give foreign countries criminal jurisdiction over military personnel stationed within their boundaries. It was under this type of agreement that Japan was demanding the right to try the Girard case.

It was the publicity given the Girard case that brought into focus the status of the GI in a foreign country. One the American public realized the full significance of the situation, a great clamor arose from the grass roots demanding a change in policy. Girard became famous overnight, because the citizens of this country began to ask each other whether or not the GI's, who were responsible for the defense of this country, had lost their Constitutional rights because of a treaty between this country and a foreign country.

This question prompted the Supreme Court of the United States to extend its term so the Girard case could be heard. It decided to hear this case during the week of July 8th which, incidentally, is the same week during which the Congress probably will take up the Bow Resolution.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs favorably reported the Bow Resolution the latter part of the week of June 24th and filed the written report on July 1, 1957. The Department of Defense issued a communication expressing deep concern over the matter and vigorous opposition to the Resolution.

This communication also contained communications from high-ranking, present and former officials of the present Administration, in strong opposition to the Bow Resolution. It is also pointed out that the State Department, acting through the Honorable Christian A. Herter, Acting Secretary, issued a statement on June 28, 1957, strongly opposing the Bow Resolution and taking the position that the Resolution is unconstitutional.

In other words, these opponents of the Bow Resolution are in favor of these GI's being tried in foreign courts. There are many people in high offices in this land who vigorously disagree with them.

The pro and con arguments have been well and fully presented. I can appreciate the sincerity with which both sides have spoken, whether they be Members of Congress or in the Executive Branch of the government, and I respect their views. However, the basic problem involved is the question, "How secure are Constitutional guaranties?"

American citizens have always been led to believe that the rights guaranteed them under the Constitution of this country were inviolable. If this is true, there is no right or authority in this country, including the President of the United States, to subject an American citizen to trial before a foreign tribunal without the consent of the American citizen involved.

To say that such power does exist is to say that the President of the United States is greater than the Constitution and that ours is, after all, a government by man and not a government by law.

In other words, if it is unconstitutional to forbid an agreement between this country and a foreign country, which violates constitutional rights of an American citizen, as the State Department alleges, it must be admitted that the Constitution of this nation is not supreme, politically speaking. This I am not prepared to do—now or in the future.

I can understand how a man, who wants to enlist in the armed services, may be willing to waive his constitutional rights and submit to the jurisdiction of a foreign tribunal. But I cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, understand the reasoning that would result in an 18-year-old boy being drafted and sent to a foreign country, without his consent and, in many cases, against his wishes, and being turned over to that foreign country to be tried before a court in which the Constitution of the United States is unknown in substance or procedure.

If the Constitution of this country is to be repealed, let it be repealed by a vote of the people—not by internationalists, the Department of Defense, the Department of State or the President of the United States.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

TO: RICHARD CAIN, Defendant, Greeting:

D. 1957, then and there to answer Plaintiff's Amended Petition filed in said Court, on the 5th day of July A. Preventive Spraying for Insects Not Wise, Brazzil Tells Gardeners

Preventive spraying for insects is not recommended by authorities the Garden Club was told by County Agent John Brazzil Thursday evening at a meeting on the lawn of the K. E. Hines' home.

Brazzil, who discussed control of pests on ornamental and vegetable crop plants, told the group that preventive spraying is not recommended because there is a residue for the average of five to seven days and if there are not bugs the spraying will not only have been unnecessary but may have killed insects who protect the plants.

Leaflets listing pest insects, description and control were distributed and discussed by the speaker. These leaflets, which are made available by College Station Extension Service, may be obtained at the county agent's office in the court house.

Both Brazzil and Dr. Leta Boswell discussed the danger of insect sprays and other controls. Many of the new insecticides are highly poisonous and can be absorbed through the skin, Brazzil warned, and must be handled with great care. The insect controls are safe if used as directed, he said.

He reminded that the better known insecticides such as DDT are still dangerous and that users must not grow lax when using the controls simply because they have been using them for a long time.

In connection with this topic, Dr. Boswell told the group that in accidents among children poisoning ranked high. She said doctors in Canyon have received brochures from the state health office listing new poisons, but that these poisons were listed only by ingredient, not by trade name.

Both she and the county agent stressed the importance of knowing the ingredients of an insecticide in case of accidental poisoning, but a list of poisons with both trade name and ingredients is at the county agent's office in case of an emergency.

Following these discussions, Mrs. Warren Parker presided over the business meeting during which the variou committees gave reports. Mrs. T. A. Black reported that the committee hoped the club could sponsor next year a rose show for Canyon.

Mrs. K. E. Hines, secretary, presented a suggestion to the club that the project of having trees planted along the dirt island on the expressway south of Canyon be adopted by the club.

Bill Dowlen, Levi Cole and Mrs. Hud Prichard were appointed by Mrs. Parker to investigate the possibilities of adopting this project.

Cherry Blossoms

BY DOVIE CHERRY

Produce from the family garden is not only mighty fine and tasty for eating but can be used for a rather unusual, creative hobby Mrs. K. E. Hines, who lives at 211 Fourth Avenue, has discovered. She has also found a use for the gardener's enemy, old Mr. Weed.

A dried okra, a devil's claw, a bit of tree fungus, a fruit from a Ja Jupa date tree (the Hines have a thriving one in their garden) and various other dried plants are what Mrs. Hines collects for her hobby —making plaques of what most people discard.

She takes a dried weed or bit of garden produce and glues it in an interesting pattern on a piece of plyboard. She uses no set pattern for her design, but "they just fall into shape," she said.

I was really fascinated by the plaques and think they are unusually beautiful. The plaques fit in well with either traditional or modern furnishings.

Mrs. Hines said people who attend the same church she does, the Methodist church, and know of her hobby are always calling her and telling her they have something for her to put on a plaque, such as an acorn or a buckeye.

And don't be too surprised about the onion blossoms by thinking that it would be quite obvious what they are. When Mary Moss Richardson made an arrangement of onion blossoms and sent it to the Methodist Church, everyone wanted to know the name of the exotic flower.

They have an old china closet given to Mrs. Hines by her mother. An antique seatee in the living room has a different history.

It seems Mr. Hines found the seatee a good deal worse for wear discarded as junk. He brought it home, refinished the wood, had it re-upholstered in hunter green velveteen and now it is a fine looking addition to the living room.

And by the way, somebody, it pays to know your furniture. According to a man who knows his antiques, the Hines' seatee, which has handcarved wood and came from Germany, has just sat around increasing in value.

The Hines' have also purchased an old secretary. And in the master bedroom they have an old-fashioned high board bed and another seatee.

I was especially interested in a white, hand painted china bowl that looked like a casserole dish. But it wasn't a casserole dish. It was what every good housewife of yesterday would immediately recognize as one of her luxuries. Yes ma'am, an old-fashioned indoor commode.

Mrs. Hines said her sister told her that women used to crochet a top and put tassels around the side of the bowl. And what do you think for? Well, modesty is a golden virtue.

The antique china closet and white, china water basin and pitcher are also mighty fine.

County Agent John Brazzil, who spoke to the Garden Club Thursday night, mentioned a home hazard due much thought and preventive measures but given comparatively little in the midst of caution signals on home hazards such as fires, falling down stairs, etc.

Brazzil stressed the importance of treating the new insecticides with the greatest of care. There's quite a bit of emphasis on preventing poisoning by household poisons but I doubt if there's nearly so much emphasis on preventing poisoning by contact with insect sprays.

Some of the new ones being distributed make short the life history of a bug, but they can also do a speedy job of erasing your footprints in the sands of time if handled carelessly.

Gardeners may have gotten some of the old sprays on their skin, washed it off and forgotten it. With many of the new insecticides, contact with the skin is to be treated not only by washing but with a rush trip to the doctor.

Some insecticides can be absorbed readily through the skin. But, as John Brazzil said, the insecticides are safe if the user reads every last word on the label and does what the letters in fine print say.

Then, the next step is to keep the children out of it before and after the plants are sprayed. Again, as Brazzil said, it's better to lose a tree or a plant than a child.

With Loula Grace Erdman moving to Amarillo, Canyon will lose its claim to one of its most creative citizens.

I'm sure the people living at Pueblo Courts will miss her. During the time Miss Erdman lived at the courts, she originated an annual "cake party" for Pueblo Courts residents. Every year some of the wives make cakes, some make coffee or lemonade and everyone has an eatin' good time.

The one this year was given in honor of Miss Erdman wishing her lots of luck back in Amarillo. Good luck from this direction, too.

And back to the Garden Club. In the business meeting Thursday night, one of the program committee members, Mrs. T. A. Black, mentioned that the committee hoped that next year the club might sponsor a rose show for Canyon.

With all the beautiful roses that have bloomed this year and in past years in Canyon, I can't think of a better idea. There are enough roses grown in Canyon. This year at the annual garden tour, the Garden Club saw over 600 rose plants and bushes at less than 10 gardens.

You Canyon rose connoisseurs and rose growers-just-for-the-heck-of-it think about it. If you like the idea, tell some of the club members. Mrs. Warren Parker is president.

LIPSTICK LOGIC

by LOUISE ALLEN

Some folks are healthy, others enjoy poor health. Symptoms and diseases come and go, but one condition — once you're a victim of it — remains chronic. That's the urge to repeat the bright sayings of your own children.

Now as long as the offspring are young and too helpless to defend themselves, this isn't pernicious. Even then, however, it's best to avoid repeating Johnny's impertinent retort to Papa or the Minister in Johnny's presence. His understanding of what makes up humor is sketchy at the age of four, and so from then on he may go around being impertinent to all comers, hoping to score another hit.

But as Johnny grows older, he is embarrassed by these accounts of his early sayings. As he becomes a man, he wonders why children are taught to use their tongues at all until they have sense enough to know what they're saying.

Maybe the only time this sport is harmless is when a group of old friends — all parents of grown-up children — get together for an occasional binge of recollecting. These are best when the children are faw away, or certainly out of earshot.

We had such a session the other night, and it was as much fun as looking at high school snapshots, or reading old love letters. There was the story of the eldest daughter, now the mother of three, who used to say, when a toy was repaired, "Now, he's him!" Of the young doctor, for whom people were neither slender nor slim — they were "slin." The irregular path was a "pair," and so on.

Each parent enjoyed a half hour of "remembering when." The second generation, now happily scattered, was none the worse for it, and a good time was had by all.

Shrunken Apples Make Realistic Doll Faces, Local Doll Doctor Finds

Mrs. Carl Smith, who has operated her doll hospital at 2007 8th Ave. for 10 years, now has perfected the technique of making doll heads from apples. She has a collection of tiny "characters" made in this way and plans to start an assortment of western dolls.

Among the apple-head dolls is Liberace at his piano (made from a ham can), with brother George standing nearby playing the violin. Critics of the concert include a portly and frowning gentleman and a lorgnette-wielding lady.

Mrs. Smith makes the doll heads by carving features into a fresh apple. Bits of bead or buttons are pressed into the sockets for eyes, and pearl buttons or beads for teeth when desired. The apples are then hung to dry, and as they dry, they shrink and wrinkle to give surprisingly realistic features to the faces.

"I read about the apple-heads in a magazine," Mrs. Smith said, "and decided to try it. They're fun to make, and with the dried apple heads and wire bodies, there's nothing about these dolls that can break."

Asked if she planned to sell the dolls, Mrs. Smith said she might sell some of the western ones she plans, but not the dolls she already has.

"They've become almost like members of the family," she said.

Interest in the Past

Don Ray Ramsey, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Ramsey of Floydada, looks at the skeleton of a 10-year-old Indian boy donated to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum. He holds bracelets and a metal gorget in his hands. The articles were given the museum by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hagaman of near Conway.

More salt is present in the Atlantic than in the Pacific.

At least 10 countries use the eagle as the symbol of supremacy.

Gift Skeleton Aids Museum

The complete skeleton of a 10-year-old Indian boy, probably Comanche, who lived sometime Coronado's 1541 expedition, has been donated to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum.

One of the few burials made available to the museum, and therefore to scientists who come here from all over the world every year to study just such finds as this, the skeleton was found in Carson County.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hagaman donated it to the museum. They said it came from a tiny cave under the caprock on their ranch near Conway in 1940, washing out after a rain.

With the bones were three iron bracelets and a crescent-shaped metal gorget. The bracelets are the type known to have been common trade items from white men to Indians, and the gorget is thought by one authority to have been made by the Spanish in the last half of the 18th century.

Mr. and Mrs. Magaman sent the material to Dr. Alex Krieger, then state archeologist and now director of a museum at Riverside,Cal., and Dr. Krieger gave them a dtailed report on the find.

He concluded that the skeleton was that of an Indian boy because the teeth were slightly worn. The teth of a white child are hardly worn at all by the age of 10, he wrote, but the teeth of an adult Indian were worn almost flat because of grit in food ground on sandstone slabs.

Meeting Set To Discuss Egg Law

A meeting to discuss the recently passed egg law will be held in Amarillo July 24 at the Natural Gas building beginning at 1:30 p. m. John Brazzil, county agent, urges all egg dealers, retailers, producers and feed dealers to attend this meeting.

F. Z. Beanblossom, poultry specialist from Texas A&M College, will be present to lead the discussion. "Because poultry and egg business is an important agricultural industry in Randall County, there should be a good representation from this area to attend this meeting," Brazzil said.

Purina-fed steers return $20.33 more per head

Steer Fatena-fed steers gained 36% faster than steers fed single-source protein in split-lot tests. 2.98-lb. average daily gain for steers getting Steer Fatena . . . 2.19 lbs. for single-source protein group. Steer Fatena steers converted an average of 7.46 lbs. of feed into a pound of beef.

In recent months, four public feeding demonstrations were conducted at sales yards in Indianapolis, Ind., Norfolk, Nebr., Louisville, Ky., and Evansville, Ind. In each test, twenty head of steers were sorted evenly into two lots. All cattle were fed the same basic ration with just one difference: one lot at each location was fed a single-source protein supplement, while the other lot in the split test received Purina Steer Fatena with stilbestrol. Length of feeding varied between 100 and 140 days . . . for an average of 125½ days.

The gap between market price and feed cost was $20.33 wider per steer in the Steer Fatena groups (average), than for the cattle fed single-source protein. In addition, the Steer Fatena cattle put on each pound of gain with an average of only 7.46 lbs. of feed. This is more than 2 lbs. less feed than the U. S. average! (See chart above.)

"Summertime . . . and the livin' is easy" says the song. But under the State Capitol dome there's quite a bit to keep folks uneasy, even in this summer lull.

House Speaker Waggoner Carr stirred things up by saying he was afraid the state couldn't afford the possible half-million-dollar tab for a special session in the fall. It might mean new taxes, said Carr, since the last Legislature appropriated nearly every cent now in sight for the next two years.

Gov. Price Daniel, who is considering the special session, hastened to say that he had "no idea" of submitting a new tax request. He pointed to his recent effort to get foreign oil imports limited so Texas production could be increased. Much of Texas' tax revenue comes from oil production, so this move, if successful, could improve the state's financial outlook.

Another source of uneasiness is the Travis County grand jury — hard at work, despite the heat. Insiders predict six or seven indictments resulting from the ICT and bribery investigations begun by the Legislature.

If true, this means more people are in trouble than outsiders can as yet account for.

Others are critical of the State Water Board's inaction. Plagued by internal disagreements, the board has delayed a year in ruling on the Canyon Dam squabble. In this case the City of San Antonio and the Guadalupe-Blanco River Authority locked horns over whether San Antonio could get water from the proposed dam.

Governor Daniel will be able to make a new appointment to this board in August.

Cox Trial Due

Trial of Ex-Rep. James E. Cox of Conroe was set to open Monday, but there are good indications it'll be delayed.

Cox was indicted last spring on charges of consenting to accept a bribe. Dist. Atty. Les Procter says the state is "ready to go." But defense attorneys admit they'd rather wait until publicity dies out and the weather cools off. They spoke of probable postponement moves.

Reporters, recalling the sweltering weeks spent covering the trial of Former Land Commissioner Bascom Giles two summers ago, admit they're not eager to see this one start now.

Insurance Study On

An overall survey of the Texas Insurance Commission's operations by a private outside agency is going forward with official approval from all sides.

First action of the new Insurance Board was to request a Texas Research League study of the department. Actually, the League already had begun the task after requests last spring by then-Comm. Chmn. John Osorio and by a House investigating committee.

Reorganized board took the reins after swearing-in of new member David B. Irons and Joe P. Gibbs, who had served "temporarily" for the past few months. Former Dist. Judge Penn Jackson was installed earlier.

Governor Daniel expressed confidence the board would soon get rid of the few "rotten apples" still remaining in the insurance industry. None of the men sought the jobs, said the governor; they were "drafted."

50-50 Plan Launched

A new era in Texas highway building opened when the state executed its first contracts to help counties with right of way costs.

Until now, law required local governments to buy the land and the State Highway Department to pay construction costs. A new law passed last spring allows the state to share 50-50 in land costs.

Highway Engineer D. C. Greer says that the highway department is working ahead of the effective date of the bill (Aug. 22), "in order to get the program under way."

School Standards Upped

More money and more study are in prospect for Texas public school children.

State Board of Education voted to hike state aid to schools by $4 per pupil. It means $82 per pupil for roughly two million pupils in the 1957-58 year.

Board also gave final confirmation to a plan to raise accreditation requirements for high schools. Future graduates will have to have 16 units of study, one more than before. Health and physical education won't count, but credits must include four in English, two in math, two in laboratory science.

Beginning in 1959 accredited high schools must have four, instead of three, full time teachers.

UT Salaries Raised

Teachers in the University of Texas system can look forward to raises averaging $800 a year for the coming school year.

Due to bigger Legislative appropriations, new budget adopted by UT regents is 16 per cent higher than this year's. Faculty members will get $500 to $2,500 raises, depending on rank. For the average prof, it means a jump from $6,009 to $6,815 per year.

Rain Needed Again

Almost a month of dry sunny weather has many Texas farmers returning to an old refrain — "more rain."

U. S. Department of Agriculture reports that most of the state, except that touched by the hurricane, needs showers.

Range growth has slowed, said USDA, and cotton is running very late. But it predicted good feed crops, possibly one of the largest sorghum harvests on record.

Short Snorts

Texas construction contract awards in June were up $34,000,000 over last year, reports the Texas Contractor magazine. A billion-dollar construction year is foreseen.

Truck freight rates will go up five per cent beginning July 10, announced the Railroad Commission. It will cost shippers an estimated $2,500,000 per year.

Texas' draft quota for August is down slightly, 547 compared to 661 in July. Col. Morris Schwartz, State Selective Service director, also announced new regulation giving draft exemption to members of Ready Reserve units.

C. C. Crutchfield of Austin has been named director of the League of Texas Municipalities. He succeeds E. E. McAdams who served as director for 22 years.

Governor Daniel has asked the federal government to approve flood control projects for Hudson, Bell, Guadalupe, Comal and Hays Counties. Work would be financed jointly by the U. S. government, local water and soil conservation districts and the affected land owners.

R. L. Phinney, district director, Internal Revenue Service, has announced that farmers may obtain refunds of federal excise tax on gasoline used for farming purposes during the fiscal year ending June 30. Claims must be filed before Oct. 1 on Form 2240 which may be obtained at county agents' offices.

Kincaid Paintings In 'Ford Times'

Three paintings by Clarence Kincaid of Canyon are featured in the August issue of Ford Times, a travel magazine distributed by the Ford Motor Co.

Kincaid's paintings illustrate an article about Palo Duro Canyon State Park. Scenes reproduced in full color in the magazine are of the lighthouse, fortress cliffs, and a vista from Coronado Lodge in early morning looking down the canyon. The watercolors have been added to permanent exhibits at the Ford Museum.

A former art teacher in Amarillo Public Schools and at Amarillo College, Kincaid will become a full-time member of the art department staff at West Texas State College in September.

This summer he is working at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum on one of a series of natural history habitat groups he has built for the museum. He hopes to find spare time after joining the WTSC faculty to continue his museum work.

Kincaid studied art at WT, at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, and at the Harwood Foundation in Taos, N. M. He is married to the former June Gilbert of Claude.

All-Day Singing at Fairview Sunday

Residents of the community, former residents and everyone interested is invited to come spend the day according to Earl Wesley.
